Anasazi Pottery

Robert H. Lister, Florence C. Lister : Anasazi Pottery before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Anasazi Pottery:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Great BookBy Bill CaverGreat book. If you are interested in Anasazi pottery, or the finds of Earl Morris, this is the book!0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Black and white pictures onlyBy zentMore of a catalog than information about Anasazi pottery in general. All the pictures are in black and white.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Four StarsBy Jeff GuerrierNot as comprehensive as I would like.

This catalogue describes and illustrates ten centuries of prehistoric southwestern pottery, most of it from the Four Corners country, where New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, and Arizona meet. The pottery shown here was collected by pioneering southwestern archaeologist Earl H. Morris (1889-1956). Since Morris's death, this collection has been housed in the University of Colorado Museum. Most of the vessels in the Morris Collection are illustrated here. While the catalogue concentrates on pieces from the area between Chaco Canyon and Mesa Verde, a few pots from other regions demonstrate the variations in prehistoric pottery making in the Southwest. Morris's comments from his own catalogue of the collection are included. In addition to describing the vessels, he tells how each came into his possession--where he found it or what he traded for it. The Listers added information about type, size, and provenience.

"Communicates to the reader a strong sense of the changes and continuities in the shapes and styles of Anasazi pottery." (American Indian Art) A well-written and nicely illustrated catalog . . . (Archaeological News) About the Author The late Robert H. Lister was for many years director of the National Park Service's Chaco Center. Florence C. Lister is a distinguished archaeologist and historian of archaeology who lives in Mancos, Colorado.
