I suspect that today's gun writers use it as a reference, when writing their articles. 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Well-researched compendium By Timothy Lairby Jr. This book divides up American experience with rifles by manufacturer, and does a very good job of integrating the story into an interesting and informative narrative. Highly recommended.

"This special edition of The Rifle in America by Philip B. Sharpe has been privately printed for members of The Firearms Classics Library. Film was prepared from an original 1938 edition (William Morrow and Co.). The book was printed and bound by Quebecor Graphics/Sherwood. The text paper was especially made for this edition by P.H. Glatfelter Company. The binding is genuine pigskin Saderra leather, Himalaya grain, furnished by the Cromwell Leather Company. Endleaves are 300-denier silk moir. Edges are gilded and spines are brass-die stamped in 22 karat gold. Cover stampings and design of the edition by Selma Ordewer."
